

National Cancer Intelligence Network and the UK Association of Cancer Registries Annual Conference 2010

17-18 June 2010

Hilton Birmingham Metropole

Further details will be available from www.ncin.org.uk and www.ukacr.org

June 2010 sees a first joint conference of the National Cancer Intelligence Network (NCIN) and the UK Association of Cancer Registries (UKACR), bringing together researchers, epidemiologists, clinicians, charities, the NHS and associated organisations to showcase the vital work being undertaken within the registries and throughout the Network. The joint conference provides an opportunity to see how innovative uses of cancer data and information can be used to improve quality and choice for cancer patients, whilst providing an essential resource for research.

Confirmed speakers

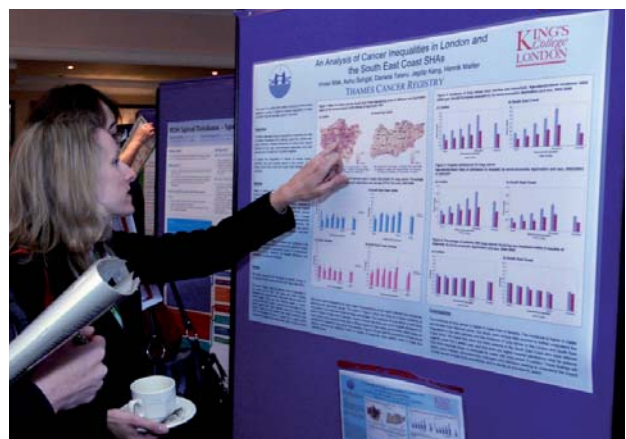

Ciarán Devane
CEO, Macmillan Cancer Support

Professor Sir Alex Markham
Chair of the NCIN Steering Group

Professor Mike Richards
National Cancer Director for England

The National Cancer Intelligence Network was launched in June 2008 to bring together cancer registries, clinical champions, health service researchers and a range of interested parties under the auspices of the NCRI from across the UK. The NCIN is working to improve data collection and promote the use and effective sharing of data in order to improve outcomes.

The annual conference of the United Kingdom Association of Cancer Registries, celebrates the quality and diversity of work produced within the UKACR and in conjunction with the NHS and associated cancer organisations within the UK. The annual conference features invited guest speakers, proffered papers and a display of posters produced throughout the registries.
